We believe that everyone has the right to an affordable, quality education.

As a society, we uphold the notion that it's a good thing — the very basis of hope and the key to the promise of upward mobility. But brutally high fees and an educational system slow to realize that everyone learns differently have created a paradox. Learning should be fun and accessible to everyone, but in many cases, it simply isn't. At Study.com, we aim to deliver a better way to learn — one that lets you learn what you want, the way you want, and in a way you can afford. We want to empower you to become that better version of yourself education is supposed to allow.

We help over 30 million students each month. Here's what a few are saying...

Saved time & money

I am a mom of 8 and could not afford the time or money that it would take for me to attend college. This gives me a chance to study and take exams that will not only save me money but also shorten the time to finish college.

Students Improved

My students have stated repeatedly how they like the videos and classroom performance [...] has improved greatly. For example, last fall, the overall class GPA for my section of 350 students improved by half a letter grade...

We believe in giving back.

As part of our mission, we offer several annual academic scholarships and regularly make direct donations to schools and charities including:

How we got started

In 2002, Cal Poly students Ben and Adrian were frustrated with the rising cost of college and the lack of tools for empowering students. They decided to team up and start Study.com with the mission of making education accessible. After over a decade of work, Study.com is now a profitable, self-funded company that reaches over 15 million students a month. Our video-based online courses are the fastest and most affordable way to earn college credit and consist of over 10,000 fun and engaging lessons. We've also created comprehensive guidance counseling resources to help students save money and make informed decisions with their education and careers.
